John Logie Baird's Televisor issued in 1930

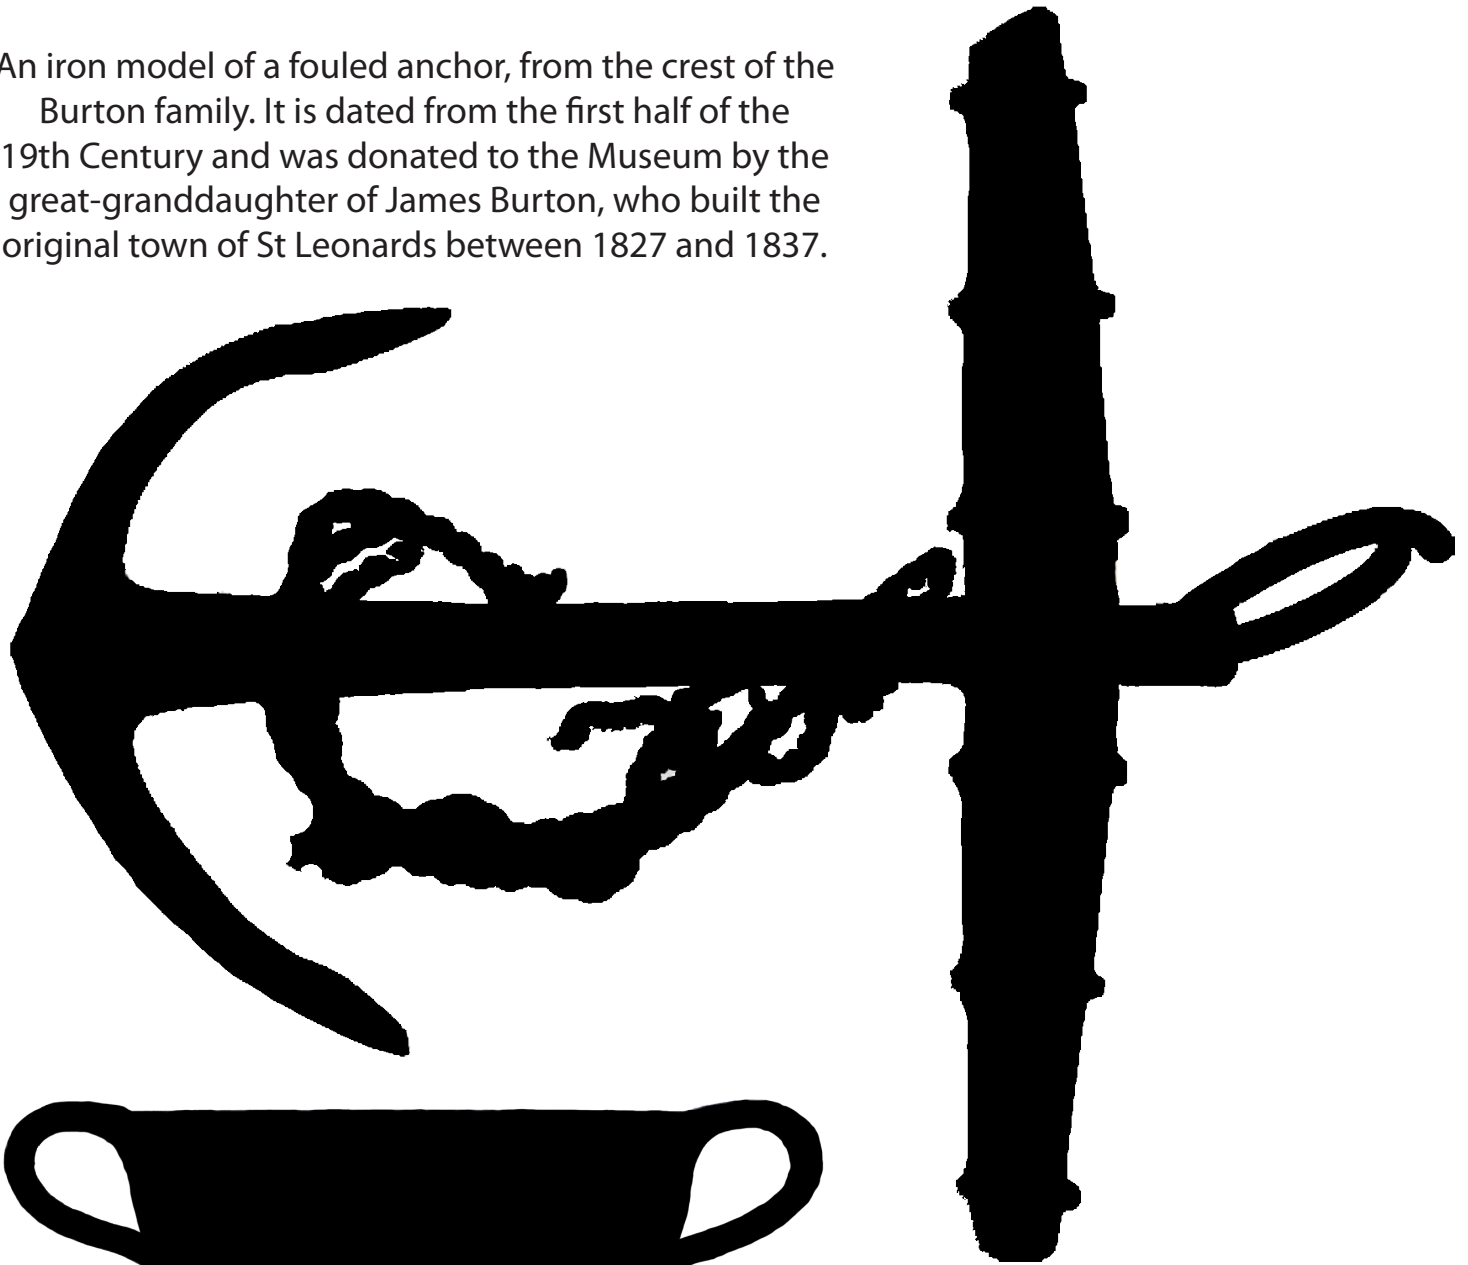

The silhouette from the St Johns Ambulance medal, which was lent to Baird by Dr George Lock in 1924.

Why won't this Shadow Puppet example work as well as the Televisor one above?

An iron model of a fouled anchor, from the crest of the Burton family. It is dated from the first half of the 19th Century and was donated to the Museum by the great-granddaughter of James Burton, who built the original town of St Leonards between 1827 and 1837.

This is a pottery kylix, also known as a Minoan stem cup or drinking cup. It is from Crete in origin and dates back to 1300BC. It is decorated with what is believed to be a cuttlefish inspired design, but of course you can't see that in the silhouette! The kylix entered the Museum's collection in 1962, donated by the Went Tree Trust.
